

WHERE IS THE FOX

mammals

Rezerwat
Źródłiska w Dolinie Ewy

Google

tag the species

VERIFY

you're right!

you're wrong it's

THE EUROPEAN ROE DEER

THE BENGAL TIGER

(Panthera tigris tigris)

None of the 'Tiger Conservation Landscapes' within the Bengal tiger's range is considered large enough to support an effective population size of 250 adult individuals.

INVADER

this species doesn't belong to this ecosystem

this species is dangerous!

last seen

2km

from you

there were

1

near you this week

ADD NEW SPECIES

THE GREY SEAL

(Halichoerus grypus)

It is a large seal of the family Phocidae or "true seals". It is the only species classified in the genus Halichoerus.

PROTECTED

this species is protected

last seen

25km

from you

there were

0

near you this week

ADD NEW SPECIES

THE EUROPEAN ROE DEER

(Capreolus capreolus)

The roe deer is relatively small, reddish and grey-brown, and well-adapted to cold environments. The species is widespread in Europe, from the Mediterranean to Scandinavia and from Britain to the Caucasus. It is distinct from the somewhat larger Siberian roe deer.

last seen

4km

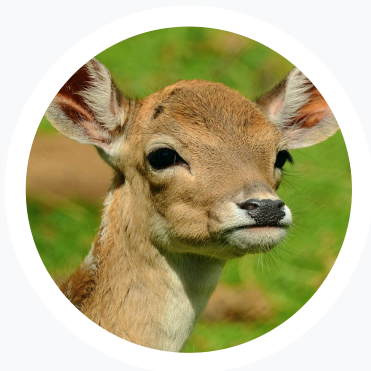

from you

there were 10

near you this week

ADD NEW SPECIES

ROE DEE

Gdansk, Poland

8

10

5

Rezerwat
Źródlika w
Dolinie Ewy

ADD NEW SPECIES